PRESENTER NOTES

60-SECOND INTRO

"I've been working with Susi and Natasha for the past six weeks — an audit of the pipeline, then two sessions to build the offer stack and objection framework. I found three distinct buyer profiles, each with a different reason to buy and a different blocker. I wanted to share that work so we're all describing the same opportunity in the same language — and see if there's a warm channel we can run alongside the paid campaigns."

Tone: peer in the room. Not consulting. Not pitching.

MEETING FLOW

1. Introduce the brief — hand it over, walk page 1 quickly. Earns credibility first. — 5 min
2. Walk the 3 buyer profiles — p.4 of brief. Ask: which profile are ads targeting? Who's converting? — 10 min
3. Show the gap — pp.2–3. Flag the broken [X]% on the website explicitly. — 5 min
4. Propose Channel B — p.6. Their campaigns untouched. Channel B is additive. — 5 min
5. Make the two asks — see right column. — 5 min

DO NOT

- Mention any fee for the marketing work — commission is the payment
- Position OLC as competing with or replacing their team
- Get drawn into ad budgets, platforms, or campaign mechanics
- Name Susi or Natasha individually — say "the team"
- Over-promise on email outreach — "one test sequence, see what converts"

THE ASKS

ASK FROM THE MARKETING TEAM

Alignment on which buyer profile to lead with in the next campaign cycle. Wrong profile = wasted budget. Right profile = fast win they can point to.

ASK FROM TOBY

Access to the member / email list for Channel B outreach.

Frame: "Before anything goes out, you approve the message. Zero risk to the brand." If he asks about commission — point to the proposal. 5% on OLC-sourced leads. Already in writing.

IF THEY ASK WHAT YOU GET OUT OF THIS

"If the warm channel performs, I earn a commission per closed unit from those leads. Toby and I already agreed the structure. The brief today is my way of making sure paid channels work from the same foundation — that's good for everyone."

NUMBERS COLD

14 Units remaining (9 T1 + 5 T2)	18/32 Sold — 56% sell-through, off-plan
