METHOD
OFFER · LEADS · CLOSE

NIRVANA LIFE

"The objective is always to help prospects see that this new opportunity will give them the greatest desire to increase their status and help them achieve their goals."

SESSION 2

Discovery Framework & First Contact

Session 1 built the offer. This session builds the conversation that gets someone to care about it. Before tactics, there are five rules. Before pitching, there are three questions. Before closing, there is a reply.

DATE	TIME	FACILITATOR
Wednesday, June 25, 2026	3:00 to 5:00 PM	Matthieu Jammers

Before Tactics, There Are Rules

The foundation every sales technique is built on

These are not frameworks. They are facts about how people decide. Everything in this session (the discovery questions, the templates, the role plays) is an application of one or more of these rules.

5 People buy with emotion and justify it with logic.

Features close the mind. Feelings close the deal. Lead with the outcome, then back it with proof.

At The Sanctuary: Lead with arriving to find the suite ready and the gym pass active. Then back it with the numbers: 10% guaranteed, 14 units, July increase.

4 People will spend more to avoid pain than to gain pleasure.

The cost of waiting (missing units, a price increase, losing the best option) is more powerful than the promise of a return.

At The Sanctuary: "14 units. July price increase. August sell-out target." These land harder than any projected return.

3 Sales is not about telling the customer what they need. It is about asking the right questions that make them want.

You don't convince anyone. You ask the right question and let them get there themselves.

At The Sanctuary: Don't pitch the yield. Ask their timeline. Their answer tells you which close to use — and which objection to address first.

2 The prospect must feel the consequences of inaction. Every sale, ask: what will happen if nothing changes today?

That answer is your close. Not the features, not the price. The cost of not deciding.

At The Sanctuary: When they say "I'll think about it" — ask: "What happens if nothing changes today?" That answer is your close.

1 Stop caring so much about whether they buy. Be willing to walk away. The harder you try, the more doubt you imply.

Detachment is not indifference. It is confidence. The buyer feels it before you say a word.

At The Sanctuary: "I don't want to keep following up if the timing's not right. If you're ready, let's set a time. If not, I'll check back in a few months." Then stop.

> Rule 3 is why we ask discovery questions. Rule 2 is why the reactivation templates work. Rule 1 is what makes the difference between a reply and silence.

0 Finish the One-Sentence Offer

15 minutes · Group exercise

We got to this at the end of Session 1. Good to come back to it with fresh eyes and lock it in together. This sentence becomes the opening of every first call. It should sound like something a person would actually say, not a brochure.

THE FORMULA

"When you [action], you get [dream outcome] without [biggest fear], even if [biggest objection]."

STARTING DRAFT

> "Own a suite inside Nirvana, earn 10% guaranteed while you're away, and always have your community waiting when you arrive, fully managed, no complexity from abroad, even if you've never invested in Bali before."

YOUR REFINEMENTS

SUSI — WHAT WOULD YOU CHANGE?

NATASHA — WHAT WOULD YOU CHANGE?

THE FINAL VERSION (AGREED BY BOTH)

- Read it out loud. If it sounds like a brochure, rewrite it. If Susi said this on a first call to an existing Nirvana member, would they lean in or pull back?

1 Why First Contact Kills Deals

15 minutes

> 74. That's how many leads in HubSpot had a conversation, showed interest, and went quiet. They were not uninterested — they were un-followed-up.

WHAT DOESN'T WORK — AND WHY

"Just checking in." "Any update?" "Still interested?" These put the burden on the buyer. They also signal low confidence — a salesperson who needs the buyer to rescue the conversation.

THE REFRAME (RULE 2)

A re-engagement message should make the buyer feel something: the possibility they are missing, or the cost of waiting. Not pressure — consequence. That consequence is your close.

THE ENERGY LAYER

When Susi picks up the phone, the buyer feels her energy before she says a word. When Natasha sends a message, the tone opens or closes the conversation before the content does. Show genuine interest in the person, not the deal. The buyer feels the difference between someone collecting data and someone genuinely curious about where they are in life.

SUSI

Energy fires before listening. The buyer feels the pitch coming before it arrives. Slow the first two minutes down — receive what they say before responding.

NATASHA

Warmth stays internal — the buyer doesn't feel it through the message. Short, direct, confident. Trust your instincts and let them show.

WHAT DO YOUR FIRST-CONTACT MESSAGES USUALLY LOOK LIKE? WRITE ONE FROM MEMORY:

1 Three Questions Before Any Pitch

30 minutes · Framework + delivery

The people you are talking to are not just buying a property. They are stepping into a new experience, and for most of them it is their first time investing in Bali. Your job is to guide them through it. That starts before any product conversation does.

WHAT THEY ARE REALLY BUYING

Every buyer has a stated reason and a real one. Beneath the investment return or the Bali base is a status driver: who they become when they own this. The investor is buying proof they make bold, unconventional moves. The lifestyle buyer is buying belonging to something rare. Discovery is how you find out which identity they are reaching for. Show them this is exactly how they get there, and the pitch sells itself.

Give, give, give, then ask. Every time you reach out, lead with something useful: a real update, a clear reason for the message, a fact they didn't have. Ask your question after. If you ask before giving anything, the chance of a reply drops sharply. The templates on the next page are built on this principle.

The goal of first contact is a reply. Not a pitch, not a close. A reply. Everything else comes after.

1 TIMELINE

"Are you looking at something for this year, or is this more of a 2027 situation for you?"

Tells you urgency and decision readiness. "This year" means ready to move. "2027" means qualify differently and don't put the same

2 PROFILE

"Are you thinking of this primarily as an investment, or do you actually see yourself using it as a base in Bali?"

Tells you which outcome they want. Pure Investor means pitch the yield math. True Believer means pitch community, belonging, and

3 COMPARISON

"Are you looking at other options right now, or is The Sanctuary your main focus?"

Tells you how to position. Comparing means differentiate first. Main focus means remove the final obstacle. If they've already

+ FOLLOW-UP

"What's the main thing you're still unsure about right now?"

Ask this once the three questions are answered. An objection raised here is a question you can answer. The same objection raised

MESSAGE · NATASHA / HUBSPOT

One question per message. Never send all three at once. Get a reply first, then go one level deeper.

"Hi [name], picking this up from where we left it. Are you thinking about a move like this for this year, or is it more of a 2027 plan? Either way, happy to work around your timeline."

PHONE · SUSI

All three in the first two minutes, naturally, not as a checklist. Genuine curiosity, not a form. Then pitch to the profile they gave you.

"Before I go into anything, are you looking at this for this year? Investment or a base in Bali? And are you comparing other options or is this your main focus?"

Why discovery closes faster: every question here is also an objection check. You're not just learning who they are — you're finding out what's in the way. Address it in discovery and it disappears from the close. Skip it and it comes back as "I need to think about it."

2 The ACA Framework: How to Respond

Use this after every discovery answer

The three questions tell you who the buyer is. How you respond to their answers is what makes them feel understood — and open. Most salespeople move straight to their next point. ACA makes the buyer feel heard first. That is what closes the gap between information and trust.

A — Acknowledge — affirm what they said

Don't agree or disagree yet. Just signal you received it. This lowers their guard before anything else.

> "That makes sense." / "Good to know." / "I hear you."

C — Clarify & Complement — restate, then tie in a character trait

Reflect back what they said in your own words. Then connect their answer to a positive identity. They feel understood and respected — not sold to. This also surfaces hidden objections: if you restate it wrong, they'll correct you and reveal what's really on their mind.

> "So what I'm hearing is — you want the return, but you'd actually come and enjoy it too. That's a smart way to look at it. The buyers I respect most think the same way — they want the asset working for them, and something they're proud to own."

A — Ask — lead the conversation where you need it to go

Now that they feel heard, they are open. Ask the question that moves them toward the close — or that surfaces the next objection to address.

> "Given that, what would need to be true for this to be a clear yes for you this year?"

ACA is not a script. It is a reflex. Practice it until Acknowledge → Clarify & Complement → Ask happens without thinking. The goal is not to sound like you're using a technique. The goal is to sound like someone who genuinely cares about the answer — and moves the conversation forward because of it.

Note: the C step is where most objections reveal themselves. When you restate and the buyer corrects you — listen hard. What they correct is usually the real concern. Address it there, not at the close.

2 Build the Three Templates

30 minutes · Rewrite in your own words

Urgency at every stage. 14 units. August sell-out. A price increase in July. These are facts. Mention them early and often, not just at close. Not as pressure, as honesty. A buyer who decides without knowing this isn't making a fully informed choice. Every template below should carry a real reason to act now.

TEMPLATE 1: REACTIVATION

For the 74 leads who went quiet after a meeting

BEFORE — WHAT WAS BEING SENT

"Hi [name], I'm Natasha from The Sanctuary in Bali. We only have 14 suites left out of 32, fully managed, 10% minimum return guaranteed, and other cool benefits. What's your ideal timeline? I ask because units have been moving faster than expected and we don't want you to miss out."

AFTER — THE AUDIT REWRITE

"Hi [name], picking this up from where we left it. Last week we hit 750 day passes in a single day — most of those people are looking for somewhere to sleep that matches what they experienced at Nirvana. That's the built-in demand. 10% guaranteed, 14 units left, price increase in July. Still thinking about this for this year?"

YOUR VERSION — WRITE IT IN YOUR OWN VOICE

TEMPLATE 2: NEW LEAD (FIRST CONTACT)

For leads who just opted in via ad · Natasha / HubSpot

"Hi [name], thanks for reaching out about The Sanctuary. Quick question before I send you anything: are you thinking of this as an investment, or are you actually planning to come to Bali and use it as a base? It changes what I share with you."

YOUR VERSION

TEMPLATE 3: NIRVANA MEMBER APPROACH

For existing club members · 700 people/day · Most underused source

"Where are you staying while you're here?" [They name somewhere else.] "Did you know you can own a suite inside the club? Fully managed, lifetime membership from day one, pays 10% guaranteed while you're away. Worth a quick conversation?"

YOUR VERSION

4 Role Play

20 minutes

ROUND 1 — LIVE EXERCISE

NATASHA — SEND IT LIVE

Write Template 1 in your own words right now and send it to one real warm lead. One question, no apology for reaching out. Short.

What you wrote:

SUSI — PHONE VERSION

Open with the timeline question only. No product mention until you've heard their answer. Coach plays buyer.

What you learned about the buyer:

ROUND 2 — RULE 1 IN PRACTICE: DETACHMENT

> When they keep saying "not yet," the answer is not another follow-up with slightly different wording. It is detachment with a clear offer:
>
> "Look, I don't want to keep following up if the timing's not right. If you're ready to look at this properly this year, let's set a time. If not, I'll check back in a few months. No pressure either way."

WRITE IT IN YOUR OWN VOICE:

ONE THING TO IMPROVE FROM THIS EXERCISE:

Before Session 3

Assigned June 25 · Due June 30 (Session 3)

NATASHA

> Send Template 1 to five warm leads in HubSpot before Session 3. Track how many reply. Come to Session 3 with one conversation that moved and one that didn't.

SUSI

> Use the three discovery questions in every first call this week before any pitch. Report back what you learned about your active leads that you didn't know before. Come to Session 3 with one conversation that moved and one that didn't.

SESSION 3 PREVIEW: CLOSING LANGUAGE & THE COMMITTED NEXT STEP

Session 3 builds on everything from today. What you learn in discovery determines which close you use. The templates are the bridge between a lead that went quiet and one that's back in conversation.

WHAT YOU LEARN IN SESSION 2	HOW IT DRIVES SESSION 3
Timeline answer: "this year"	Full close with urgency: 14 units, July price increase, no future phase
Profile: Pure Investor	Close on yield math: $179K, same pool return as Tower 2, best ROI on capital deployed
Profile: Nirvana True Believer	Close on belonging: community, lifetime membership, owning a piece of something they already love
Comparison: looking at others	Differentiate first, then urgency. "What would the other option need to offer to win?"
Lead says "I need to think about it"	Rule 2 close: "What will happen if nothing changes today?" Never accept "not yet" as a final answer.

What to bring to Session 3: your reactivation results (Natasha), your discovery call notes (Susi), and at least one real conversation to work through together.